

A Tradition of Caring

Caring for the elderly is more than a Jewish tradition. It is a tenet that has been passed from generation to generation and lives today in the hearts and minds of the families that comprise our community and our staff that so diligently and passionately serve it.

Since 1982, the Jewish Community Housing Corporation of Metropolitan New Jersey has been dedicated not only to meeting but exceeding the highest expectations of the retirees who live in our active senior and assisted living communities, as well as their families. Our goal is not just to provide a place to live, but to create a true sense of community.

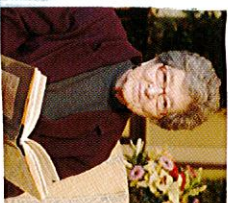

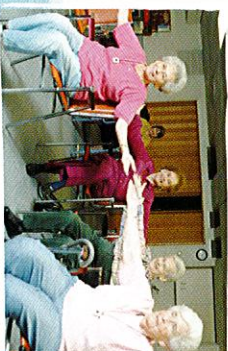

"I feel like I'm back living in a college dorm. It's so stimulating. You feel alive here and that's incredibly important. You're part of a community."

Dolly Moser, who lives at the Lester Senior Housing Community in Whippany.
